

Abstract

The automatic shutoff overflow controller comprises a circuit which engages between a source of power and a water processing device, the controller, sensing an undesirably high water level in 5 a liquid containment into which water drains from the device, shutting off the device and producing an audible warning that such condition exists.